

Boundless Cybersecurity for 250 Staff and 18,000 Citizens

Ansfelden is a town of 18,000 residents, close to Linz in the heart of Upper Austria. The Ansfelden municipal administration employs around 250 staff at 25 different locations, ensuring that the town's citizens and visitors are provided with the services and assistance they need on a daily basis. IT security is crucial to the smooth, integrated running of the municipality. Ansfelden has worked with SonicWall products since 2006. As part of the town's new partnership with SonicWall partner Lenz IT, a fresh look was taken at the local authority's security infrastructure.

Business Need

To meet the evolving needs of the municipality a security review was undertaken, Ansfelden sought a solution that could be centrally managed, as well as implemented and supported by the municipality's IT partner.

Solution

The new integrated solution includes various models of SonicWall's NSa and TZ series, as well as ten SonicWave access points, a virtual SMA 500v and a virtual email security appliance.

Results

The combination of SonicWall hardware and virtual appliances has ensured more effective security against known and unknown threats and enables unified management of the network through a central admin office. Furthermore, over 20 different locations are now connected through a VPN, creating the perfect basis for a voice-over-IP solution and the integration of these external locations into a unified communications structure.

Benefits

- More efficient security against known and unknown threats
- Centralized, unified management
- Integration of 20+ locations through VPN
- Integration of external offices within a unified structure
