

Badminton School upgrades security while reducing troubleshooting time

Badminton School begins its second decade with SonicWall by continuing to protect its network and students.

Business Need

Since it was founded in 1858, Badminton School, a thriving day and boarding school, has provided a holistic education, which prepares girls to be successful in a global society. Badminton School is an organization that must have ease of administration and security that meets its own safeguarding requirements as well as requirements from the UK's "Keeping Children Safe in Education" guidelines. The school is in need of a feature-rich security system to meet the differing needs of its pupils.

Solution

To meet government requirements, Badminton School deployed a pair of NSa Series Next-Generation Firewalls to replace its older SonicWall firewalls. The school has been using SonicWall firewalls for over 10 years across three different generations. It deployed a variety of security services to protect its borders and detect network-based threats. The school also heavily relies on application control and content filtering to deliver age-appropriate content to its pupils.

Results

Badminton School has now been able to consolidate its connectivity into a single security solution. The school also significantly reduced its time spent on supporting and troubleshooting connectivity issues. Staying with SonicWall allowed Badminton School to easily migrate its previous configuration, which resulted in seamless and rapid deployment of the NSa Series NGFWs. "SonicWall has continued to deliver in all areas, and the appliances have been rock-solid since day one," says Daniel Kingdon, network services manager at Badminton School.
