

POLISH PRESS GROUP SECURES ITS BRANCHES AGAINST CYBER-ATTACKS WITH SONICWALL NEXT-GENERATION FIREWALLS

SonicWall next-generation firewalls (NGFW) secure Polska Press's data centers and its most important branches against diverse cyber threats. The appliances deliver automated, real-time breach detection and prevention, as well as ongoing insight into the extensive networks and applications used by business users at the company.

Business need

The Polska Press Group is one of the biggest press publications in Poland and a leader in the regional and local media markets. The major areas of Polska Press's operations include free and paid press titles, the internet and printing facilities. Polska Press has over a dozen local branches and six printing houses. The company publishes 20 regional dailies, over 150 local weeklies and several monthly magazines.

Solution

Polska Press carried out a comprehensive analysis that included testing of devices offered by various security vendors. The selected security appliances were included into the IT infrastructure of the company's two critical locations in a transparent mode, and then they were assessed based on their functionality and performance. Polska Press chose SonicWall solutions due its functional and performance characteristics. SonicWall products were very easy to operate thanks to its convenient administration panel interface and high functionality.

Benefits

- Higher security Customizable configuration to meet needs
- Easy access to insights into network and application operations

“We used various security software solutions. However, we had limited network traffic control capacity in the application layer. Hence, we decided to implement a next-generation application firewall that would meet today's business and technological trends as well as the realities of mobile and remote work,”
